

Cupertino Program Description

Cupertino home is a Community Integrated Living Arrangement (CILA) home which houses developmentally challenged adult men. It is a community based program. Based on the client's needs and aspirations a broad range of support services and levels of supervision will be provided, with the goal of meeting individual needs, maximizing community integration and promoting independence and economic self-sufficiency. The array of services includes but are not limited to:

- Assessment of Functional and vocational skills
- Training in Independent Living Skills (ILS) in the areas of: nutrition, meal planning, shopping and preparation; money management and banking
- Training in Daily Living Skills including; personal hygiene and clothing care
- Training in behavioral and personal management
- Training in social and recreational/leisure skills
- Involvement in the community based on the individuals needs and desires, balanced with safety and risk factors.
- Monitoring and supervising of individual's financial records including, personal needs, medical payments and desired spending
- Providing supported employment, or community job placement
- Providing transportation
- Providing assistance for all necessary health services
- Monitoring of medical services and training in self-administration of medications

- 24- hour supervision and assistance in all areas